SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY

Reported weekly for the Ledger.

The Edible Clays.—A Wanted Instrument.—A Proposed Great Telescope.—Nitrogen-Breathing Plant Organs.—What Is It?—Another Safe Celluloid.—Mine Telegraphy.—The Straight Filament Lamp.

In India, where earth-eating is common, Drs. H. H. Mann and David Hooper have made a new investigation of the so-called edible clays. In 33 samples, silica was the chief ingredient, constituting over 80 per cent in 8 samples. "Gopichanda," a prepared earth from Baroda, was found to be a marl with 61.53 per cent of calcium carbonate; but only 8 of the other samples showed more than one per cent of lime. "Multanimatti," sold for edible purposes in bazars of Baluchistan, Baroda and Bengal, is a buff-colored shale. Laterite is the edible clay of Mysore; halloysite, that of Travancore and the Wynaad; Cimolite is baked and eaten in Bombay; and hydrated silica finds favor in Madras and Travancore. "Palia" stone, used in Rajputana to satisfy hunger in time of famine, is talc-schist. Most of the remaining specimens are mixtures of sand and clay. These earths have only infinitesimal proportions of organic matter, and they are utterly without food value.

A needed scientific instrument pointed out by Dr. Ouade, a French meteorologist, is a nivometer, or snow-gage. Attempts to use the pluviometer, or rain-gage, have been made, a lamp being added to melt the snow, but the melting has been partial, and the opening has become filled. The lack is of greater importance than may at first appear. The snowfall in France, for instance, has been diminishing for years, and accurate measurements are required to determine whether this is a temporary phase in a cycle of wet and dry years, or whether the snow is soon to disappear permanently.

For the international telescope urged for southern observations, Prof. E. C. Pickering suggests a 7-foot reflector, with a focal length of 44 feet, to cost $500,000.

The leaf-organs lately studied by T. Jamieson, of Aberdeen, indicate that all plants—and not merely the leguminous ones having root-nodules—derive some of their nitrogen directly from the air. The microscope will show these organs on Spergula arvensis, the common weed corn-spurry, where they appear as short, blunt, transversely-divided, upright hairs; and in early development the highest segment of each hair is found to contain greenish chlorophyly like matter separated from the air by only a very delicate film. It was conclusively proven that these green tips—absorbing atmospheric nitrogen—are manufactories of albumen. Different stages were seen to correspond with the age of the hair, some tips revealing the beginning of the process, others being gorged with albumen, while still older hairs were discharging the albuminous matter through the lower sections. A circular space surrounding the segments receives a continous in-flow of the liquid albuminous matter, which passes onward into the internal channels of the leaf. The organs were found in many other plants, wild and cultivated, including the chickweed, nettle, turnip, rape, potato, beat, carrot, lettuce, chicory, tobacco, geranium, petunia, balm, daisy, holly and pine. Owing to the abundance of these organs for taking up air nitrogen the turnip, the bean family and other highly nitrogenous dicotyledons require little farm-yard manure. On the other hand the cultivated monocotyledons, such as cereals and grasses, have few of the leaf-organs, and urgently need nitrogenous manure.

Perhaps no more singular feature of any planet is known than the great red spot that appeared on Jupiter in 1878. Round at first, this soon became elliptical with a length of 25,000 miles and a breadth of 6,400 and the original deep red color has faded out in recent years. While the oval form has been kept, the spot has not been stationary. With the late breaking out of a conspicuous double belt on Jupiter, the drift has greatly accelerated, and the spot has moved westward 11,000 miles in three months.

The many uses and inflammable character of celluloid have led to an active search for substitutes. The new material of C. Trocquenet, a French inventor, is a mixture of cellulose, asbestos and the organic matter contained in oyster shells. The cellubiose is obtained by teating seaweed successively with acid and alkali, and washing. The asbestos is ground with petroleum oil; while the ground oyster shells are treated with hydrochloric acid, and the insoluble residue is boiled with water, washed with weak alkaline solution, and collected on a filter. The mixtures contain from 55 to 65 parts of the cellulose, 2 to 12 parts of the oiled asbestos, and 20 to 45 parts of the oyster shell substance. The mass is treated with formaldehyde, suitably colored, and then pressed into any form or object for which celluloid can be used.

A miner recently imprisoned by a cave-in was able to signal his rescuers by tapping on the air pipe which entered the workings. The sounds gave only vague information, and he affirms that his confinement might have been shortened many hours, if he could have transmitted details of his surroundings. This experience has led to the suggestion that a simple code of signals be prepared for emergency use. Some may learn the Morse alphabet, but this can hardly be expected of all miners, while a few easily remembered combinations of taps may serve to give intelligible directions to rescue parties.

In the new form of incandescent lamp known as "linolite" the carbon filament is used straight instead of coiled. This brings a much greater length of filament than usual before the reflector, which is of semi-tubular form, and it is claimed that the same consumption of energy yields from 50 to 100 per cent more light than the ordinary glow lamp—that is, this increased amount is made available.

For Sale or Rent—160 acres 1½ miles from lone all fenced, house and barn, 18 head of cattle, 60 acres under cultivation, 2 living springs; also irrigating ditch. For particulars inquire of Mrs Norman Johnson, Ione City, Cal.

Hard to Catch Up.

Two Silesians, seated in a music hall, began to argue about the music of Wagner. The argument as it progressed grew heated. The upshot was that the younger challenged the older Silesian to a duel.

But the older Silesian declined to fight.

"No, no," he said. "I refuse to meet you. The risks are not equal. You, you see, are a bachelor, whereas I am a married man with three children. I'll tell you what to do. Go get married and wait till you've a family as large as mine. Then, when our risks are alike, come and challenge me again."

The younger man complied. He married. Three years passed and one day three years later he went, accompanied by a nursemaid, to his opponent's home.

"Here I am," he said fiercely. "My wife is at home. In this coach are my three children. Now for the duel."

But the older man shook his head.

"Not yet awhile," he said. "I have five now."

Exercise For Business Men.

The average city business man without physical impediments to fight against can probably get along successfully on such an exercise schedule as the following:

First.—Five minutes each day of purely muscular exercise, such as can be taken perfectly well in one's room without any special apparatus.

Second.—Short intervals during the day of fresh air, brisk walking, deep breathing. This can all be secured in the regular order of the day's business. A man can easily spend as much as half an hour walking out of doors every day. This is for heart, lungs and digestion.

Third.—The reservation of at least one day a week for rest and recreation, for being out of doors, for playing games, etc. This is essential. This is for both body and mind. A man who thinks he can get along without at least one vacation time a week simply proves his ignorance.—World's Work.

The Bite of a Girl.

The bite of a girl may be as productive of poisonous germs as improperly prepared foods, according to the statements of Professor W. D. Miller of the University of Berlin. In a lecture the professor said that a bite of a pretty girl would often bring a quicker and more horrible death than the bite of a serpent. Professor Miller, who has made a specal study of the bacteria of the mouth, said that only a short time ago he experimented on a beautiful girl in Germany and found that an arrow dipped in saliva from her mouth would send its victim in death throes more terrible than one dipped in the venom of the most deadly snake.—What to Eat.

Twins Born In Different Years.

"I have often been present at the birth of twins," said an old nurse. "Only once was I present, though, when the twins were born in different years."

"Twins born in different years? You are crazy," said the young bride.

"Not a bit of it," said the old nurse. "The thing happened in Pittsburg in 1899. The first twin was born at 11:30 o'clock on the night of Dec. 31, 1899, and the second was born at 1 o'clock in the morning of Jan. 1, 1900. There are, ma'am, a number of other cases recorded of twins born in different years."

The Cat Had Chickens.

"If you please, sir," she said, "the cat has had chickens."

"Nonsense, Mary," laughed he. "You mean kittens. Cats don't have chickens."

"Was them chickens or kittens as you brought home last night?" asked the old woman.

"Why, they were chickens, of course."

"Just so, sir," replied Mary, with a twinkle. "Well, the cat's had 'em!"

A Comprehensive Verdict.

A child in an English town was killed by a steam atomizing apparatus falling on it. The coroner's jury brought in the following curious verdict: "Death resulted from shock following bronchitis and whooping cough, caused through the shaking of the house by the firing of a gun at the government proof butts on the Pulmstead marshes."

Raising His Wages.

Y.—You know I told you a few days after he employed me that he said he'd raise my wages in a month or so?

Z.—Yes. And didn't he?

"No. I misunderstood him. He said he'd try to raise my first week's wages by that time. I haven't had a shilling yet."—London Tit-Bits.

Stockton Hospital for Insane

By Arthur J. Pillsbury.

As soon as California began to be a state it began to make provision for taking care of its unfortunates, by establishing a state general hospital at Stockton. To this general hospital the insane were sent, but it was found not to be quite the place for them, and in 1853, the general hospital was abolished and an insane asylum was established in its stead.

This was unfortunate in part and in part highly commedable. It was proper to establish an asylum for the insane, but the state general hospital should have been perpetuated, growing year by year to meet the growing demand until by now. California would, without doubt, have a state general hospital the equal of that of Massachusetts, a public charity of unsurpassed beneficence.

Boosted With A Donation.

Captain Weber, of revered memory, gave the State of California one hundred acres of choice land adjoining the village of Stockton to be used for asylum purposes, and since then, twenty-nine acres more have been added by purchase to the plot, which has been built upon and adorned until it has in the state no rival as a park unless it be the capital grounds at Sacramento. Some of the ground was low lying and all of it was adobe, but it has been filled in and enriched from time to time with thousands of cart loads of sedimentary "slickens" from the bed of the Calaveras river, until it is now all productive and well drained.

It Grew and Grew.

The asylum was opened in July 1853, and by the end of that year had 102 patients. In ten years more it had 583, and in another decade 1156, by which time the state had faced the problem of establishing another asylum and had broken ground at Napa. On the day of my last visit to Stockton Hospital, September 20, 1906, there were confined in the institution 658 women and 1184 men. Added to this total of 1842 persons, whose processes of cerebration do not sufficiently accord with those of other people outside to warrant their being at large; there are 65 attendants in the male wards, 43 attendants in the female department, 15 employes on farm and in the dairy, and enough officers, engineers, mechanics etc. to bring the population up to a round 2,000 persons to be fed and clothed and generally cared for at public expense.

How They Are Housed.

Of the old, original hospital of 1853 little or nothing remains. The work of rebuilding with permanent brick structures began in the fifties and kept on, piecemeal, until an aggregate of $248,000 had been expended in tearing down and building greater what is now known as the "old" hospital which still accommodates between 500 and 600 men patients.

The beautiful and commodious Womans' hospital was built between 1864 and '68 at a cost of $250,000. It was built to accommodate 500 patients, but there are now 658 in it, and always room for one more, although not always easy to tell where to put another one.

The splendid appearing men's main hopsital was completed in 1885 at a cost of $224,000. Other buildings, accessory to the general use, have been built from time to time until the state now has invested in buildings, something more than $850,000. For ten years or more there has been little or no new building done at Stockton, but only remodeling in order to make room for more patients.

Condition of Buildings.

The hospital buildings are all stanch and were uninjured by the earthquake of April 18, but this is not saying that they would have withstood such a shock as that which threw Agnew down, for they would not, and yet they are distinctly better built buildings than those at Agnew ever were.

But they are not modern and the state should build no more like them. The plan of having one hallway down the center with rooms off both sides is not good for an insane hospital, although it may do for a hotel. In a hospital the patients have to live in the hallways, and only sleep in adjacent rooms. A better type of building is one that has airy, sunny, octagonal, projecting bay window-like rooms either at the end or in the middle of the wards, letting in a great flood of light and constituting the sitting rooms instead of using the hallways for sitting rooms. The buildings at Stockton made some attempt to attain this end, but the octagonal projections were far too small and projection far too little to make the wards what should be.

Models in Furnishings.

There are twenty-six wards in the male department of Stockton hospital, including one at the ranch. They are all clean and as wholesome as they can be made with sunshine that can be gotten into them, but they are as bare as the cupboard of Old Mother Hubbard. What soap and elbow grease can do has been done for them, but nothing more.

It is very different with the furnishings of the twenty-three wards in the Woman's buildings. Taken as a whole, these wards are surpassed by nothing in the United States, except the receiving wards in some of the up-to-date hospitals and some of the institutions for rich persons and where each person has a suite of apartments at $50 to $60 per week. The hallways are carpeted there are couches and rocking chairs, stands with vases and potted plants, and the walls are plentifully hung with engravings. In short, the wards are parlors good enough for the homes of middle class people, which means good enough for anybody.

And the insane inmates earned all the furnishings themselves. Under the administrative direction of the very capable Miss Tuffts, matron for twenty years, the women patients have crocheted and knitted, hemstitched and pieced together fancy articles which have been sold to visitors and the proceeds invested in things that makes the home comfortable and inviting.

Magnitude of the Task.

Some idea of what it has meant to these busy fingers to so adorn twenty-three wards may be gained from the following estimates for the furnishing of the entrance ward:

130 yards carpet at $1.20	$156.00
One bookcase	22.00
150 bks. 25c each	37.50
50 pictures at $3, each	150.00
12 rockers	80.00
12 cane settees	60.00
Lace curtains	10.00
Total for one ward	$505.50

It has been a task of fifteen years to equip all these wards in this way, but it has been done, and has proven worth while. Such things soothe the the troubled spirit and quiet the distraught brain, and the breakage and destruction has been less than it would have been had the same things gone into a private family with children.

Men's Wards Need The Same.

The men's wards need to be furnished likewise, but, unfortunately for the men patients, although more than 300 of them are engaged in productive labor, their product, while it inures to the common good of all the inmates, does not command a price in the open market. It would cost $7,000 or $8000, to fit up men's wards correspondingly well, but I believe that the state should do it. It would be money well and humanely spent, and would help to heal hurt minds.

Cost Of Care and Feeding.

This Stockton state family of 2,000 persons has a good capacity to consume. As a maker of a market for produce it is not to be sneezed at. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906, the item of flour footed up $10,458.80; fresh meat $14,879.29; butter, $12,532.16; potatoes, $4,017.63; syrup, $3,236.01; eggs, $2,002.20; tea, $1,349.05; coffee, $1,985.05; tobacco, $2,451.48; clothing, $5,280. The total cost for maintenance for the year figured up $218,874.52, and the institution did not have more than it needed, in fact, has had to scrimp some to come out even. The purchasing is honestly and efficiently done and at bottom prices.

Going Into Farming.

The legislature of 1905 appropriated $40,000 with which to buy more farming land for Stockton Hospital, and the Board of Managers purchased 400 acres two miles north of the hospital grounds. Out of the contingent fund the Board afterwads purchased 121.37 acres adjoining at $123.50 per acre, a total of $14,989.19 or $4,989.19 for one of the best farms in the neighborhood. The soil is adobe except as to some peat lands, is under ditch and is being prepared for irrigation. One colony of workng patients has been established out there already and more colonies will follow. In fact, a colony system for chronic insane is likely to develop on this farm that will one day be as populous as the parent institution, if the entire institution does not go there itself. So fast is Stockton growing that the original site of 29 acres, cut up into town lots, will soon for sell enough to replace all the buildings now constituting the institution and values will increase more rapidly in the future than they have in the past. In fact in another decade Stockton will have built entirely around the hospital grounds.

The Future Should Be Looked To.

The eventuality above outlined should prompt the Board of Managers to have the new farm site laid out to meet future requirements in order that trees may be planted where they will be wanted and building spots provided for utilization by-and-by. Meantime, the farm can produce enough milk and meat, potatoes and vegetables, to cut those big items of support down to moderate figures if they cannot be eliminated altogether. Stockton will some day be crazy for the crazy peoples' grounds for a public park and it may be easily for the advantage of both state and city to have the present grounds relinquished for that purpose.

Things Wanted.

Stockton Hospital is fairly equipped for taking good physical care of insane persons, but it is devoid of equipment for healing hurt minds. Medicine can do little toward re-establishing a disordered intellect. The best curative agencies are mechanical, and Stockton Hospital is devoid of mechanical appliances for the physical treatment of the mentally ailing.

The need is for two cottages, large and airy, one near the men's hospital and one near the women's, each equipped with appliances for giving hot, Turkish, steam, electric and prolonged baths, massage, wet packs, showers, sprays and whatever else constitutes a part of an up-to-date curative system.

With these appliances should be snug single rooms with deadened walls, where patients from the baths may sleep undisturbed and undisturbing; parlors and gardens where are singing birds, flowers, books, pictures and musical instruments and plenty of white-capped, white-clad, sweet, trained young women attendants and nurses, on the male wards as well as female, to help nature do the rest. It will cost $50,000 or $60,000 to supply this need, but it will pay pecuniarily as well as humanely. The difference between turning patients back into society cured within a few weeks and keeping them for 12 to 15 years (the average longevity in an institution) will repay all the cost within a few years. It is not unreasonable to anticipate an increase of 25 per cent in cures as a result of supplying this need, and it will be culpable negligence in the legislature not to supply it.

Dr. Asa Clark.

This article is too long already, but it will be sadly incomplete without reference to the "Grand Old Man," who has devoted so many years of his life to its welfare. Dr. Asa Clark was born in Essex county, New York, June 29, 1824, graduated in medicine in 1849, and came to California the same year. He practiced his profession at Placerville, Santa Barbara and Los Angeles, and was made superintendent of the Stockton Hospital in 1861. He held this position until 1871, when he resigned to undertake a contract for caring for the insane of Nevada and Arizona in a private hospital in Stockton. He was made superintendent of the State Hospital again in 1892, and held the position uninterruptedly until August 10, 1906, when he retired to make a place for his son, F. P. Clark, whom he has practically reared to care for insane persons. At the time of his resignation, although past eighty-two years, Dr. Asa Clark retained unimpaired not only his faculties of mind, clear as the peals of church tower chimes, but his sympathies for the distraught of mind were as keen and deep and broad and sweet as the fountain of human hope. May the twilight of his life deepen into the darkness that precedes the new dawning with all the tranquillity of a California summer night.

Some Other Old Timers.

Much remains that can not be said, but it may be of interest to know that Mrs Sterling has been continuously a patient in the Stockton Hospital since 1852, that William Harrison Light came in 1853 and is still there; that Herman Bauer has been an attendant for 43 years, 41 of which have been spent in one ward. Paul Jensen has been an attendant for 37 years, and has broken scores, perhaps hundreds, of new attendants into service during that time, and, though growing old, is good for years to come.

Use For Spoiled Beer.

"There is no need," said a brewer, "for us to throw away beer that has turned sour, nor is there any need for us to try to doctor it up. We have a ready sale for our spoiled beer among cement makers. Don't think from this that cement makers have a morbid taste for sour beer. Nothing of the kind. They use this beer in making cement for leather joints. It takes the place of acid, being cheaper and yet just as good."

Not an Impostor.

A proud young father telegraphed the news of his new responsibility to his brother in this fashion: "A handsome boy has come to my house and claims to be your nephew. We are doing our best to give him a proper welcome." The brother, however, failed to see the point and replied: "I have not got a nephew. The young man is an impostor."

Natural History.

"Mamma, what are twins?" asked little Bobby.

"Oh, I know," chimed in Dorothy, with all the superiority of an elder sister. "Twins is two babies just the same age, three is triplets, four is quadrupeds, and five is centipedes."—Harper's Weekly.

Why Larks Are Easily Caught.

No bird is so easily netted as the lark; he generally starts from the ground just before the lower edge of the net touches him and invariably mounts perpendicularly. This characteristic propensity to ascend at once may be observed by any person who "treads up" a lark in a field and satisfactorily illustrated by releasing, at the same moment, a newly captured lark and a sparrow from a cage or hat within the precincts of a room. While the sparrow will fly off horizontally, dash himself against the window and lie almost stunned from the shock, the lark will almost always mount upward to the ceiling and flutter there for a time in vain efforts to reach the sky before he attempts any other mode of exit; but this habit is fatal to him in the netting season. He would generally be able to escape, as indeed the bunting or clod bird, the sparrow and the linnet constantly do, by flying straight forward; but ascending, as he does, directly from the ground the moment his wings have touched the upper part of the net it is suffered to drop suddenly, and his capture is rendered inevitable.—London Standard.

An Incident of Life In New York.

The street beggar with pockets lined with money is a fairly familiar figure of city life, but one of the free dispensaries reports an instance of an attempt to get free medicine on the plea of poverty that deserves a place in the catalogue of good stories of graft. A middle aged woman appeared the other day and got a prescription, after which she took her place in the line of persons waiting to have their medicine made up by the apothecary. This particular woman, it should be said, had given satisfactory answers to all the questions put to her designed to show whether she was a proper subject for charity. Suddenly there was a cry: "I'm robbed! I'm robbed!" The victim was this woman, who so far forgot her previous professions as to assert that her pocket had been picked and that the thief had got away with $90. Then she lost the opportunity to get free medicine, thus adding, in her view, insult to injury.—New York Post.

Acute Laryngitis.

George Washington died of a disease that was then called a quinsy, but which is now known as acute laryngitis. His physicians treated him according to their best light and knowledge, but such treatment now would be little short of criminal. An eminent authority says that if medical men had known as much then as they do now the distinguished patient would probably have been cured in a week. As it was, he slowly strangled to death by the closing of his throat. At the present time physicians treat a case of this kind by tracheotomy—that is, by making an opening into the windpipe, through which the patient may breathe. They also diagnose a case by using the laryngoscope, which enables them to look into the throat and see exactly what the trouble is.

Are Ministers' Sons Bad?

A bishop marked the names of those whom he deemed worthy of remembrance for some service performed in religion or politics or literature or science or art or commerce or philanthropy or warefare, or some other aspects of the various life of the nation. Of such names he found 1,270 who were the children of clergymen or ministers, taking no account of those who were grandchildren of clergymen or more remote descendants. Of the children of lawyers, there were 510, and of doctors 350. The sons of clergymen who became themselves clergymen were 350. He further asserts that the superiority which the clergy enjoy in respect to their children to the other professions lies beyond dispute. The superiority has been not of numbers only, but of degree. From clerical homes have sprung more distinguished sons than from the homes of any secular profession.—Leslie's Weekly.

A Funny Eagle.

A Russian grand duke was once the guest of a German prince. It was early in the last century. In Russia the imperial double headed eagle is to be seen everywhere and on everything throughout the empire—stamped, painted, embroidered or sculptured. At that period the education of grand dukes was somewhat limited. This grand duke went out shooting in Germany and, among other things, shot a large bird. He asked an experienced huntsman who accompanied him what the bird was. "An eagle, your highness," was the answer. The grand duke turned on him in an irritated way. "How can it be an eagle," he asked, "when it has only one head?"

Shadeless Forests.

Large tracts of dense forests in Australia are practically shadeless. Many kinds of trees in that strange country turn their edges instead of the flat surface of the leaves to the sun, and thus one may stand under a tree of enormous size and be as fully exposed to the sun as though he were in the open plain. Travel through these forests is said to be exceedingly arduous work, as the trees, while they do not cut off the sun, prevent the breeze from reaching the ground, and thus the traveler experiences a stifling heat.

The government of a county is an entirely different affair from the government of the nation. National management demands, not only the ordinary business qualifiaction, but a fixed and settled policy. Hence, it is necessary to a successful administration to have officials of the same political party, that is men who are in sympathy with a certain well-defined policy. To have a mixture of protectionists and free-traders at the head of affairs would mean a disturbance of industry, an upheaval that would be disastrous to the commonwealth. In county management there is no such danger of a mixed political complexion in governmental affairs being prejudicial to public interests. On the contrary, it is highly important from the standpoint of efficient government that county officers be not all of the same political organization. The evils of such a one-sided complexion must be easily suggested to any intelligent mind. For instance, when all the court-officers are of the same political stripe—and bitterly partisan at that—the outlook for an impartial and satisfactory administration is not as favorable as it would be if there were a mix-up of parties. We may talk as we please, about keeping the judiciary out of party politic. It is only talk. As a matter of fact, judges are often as bitterly partisan as other officials, and are not averse to taking the initiative in party movements, and using their influence to further the interests of the party of their choice. Voters of Amador county, especially those who are disposed to be independent in the exercise of the right of suffrage, should see to it that the three officers of the court to be elected in Amador county this fall are not all the democratic persuasion. Because that would make a straight-out democratic administration, the judge being a democratic hold-over anyway. Conceding that the candidates for these offices are evenly balanced as far as qualifications are concerned, still it behoves the independent voter from patriotic motives to cast his ballot for the republican nominees rather than the democratic candidates. If all the republican aspirants were elected there would still be a mix-up politically. Voters should ponder over this matter thoroughly. Study it in all its bearings, and vote for the best interests of the community.

W. E. Proctor republican candidate for sheriff, this week came to Jackson and will make this city his headquarters for the balance of the campaign. He is working like a Trojan, and is gaining in strength daily. He is not as up-to-date in methods of political campaigning as some who have made a life study of such matters. He has not learned the tactics of the smooth-bore office seekers, in trying to ingratiate himself with everybody he meets. He is backward in intruding where he is not personally acquainted. This is apt to mislead some to think he is not affable and sociable; but as a matter of fact he is to a marked degree, and this will be fully demonstrated before this campaign is over. Proctor is making headway. There is no ground for a republican to give support to the other man; many reasons might be given why democrats should refuse to vote for the candidate of their party. We have suffered enough from the preceding regime to seek a return to the methods then prevailing. All sorts of dodges are being resorted to to cajole voters to support the democratic candidate. Promises will be made to straddle both sides of a question to that end. Don't be fooled by such campaigning. Proctor is traveling the straight path. He simply says "If elected I will deal fairly to all, and impartially discharge the duties of my office." That is the sort of a man we want. And he is going to get there.

It is doubtful whether either the republican or democratic nominee for govenor will be able to visit Amador county. There is no appointment out at present for either Gillett or Bell for this county. It may be that toward the end of the campaign a speaking appointment may be arranged for this section, but nothing definite can be said just now. A strong effort will be made to that end. If one gubernatorial candidate comes, the other will almost surely follow. Should Amador be left out of the speaking list, it will be the first campaign for the last thirty or forty years that such has been the case.

We are pleased to hear that John E. Grambart, the republican nominee for supervisor in the fifth district, is makin a rustling canvass. He is doing everything possible to win. Many in that district are inclined to the opinion that he will win out. He is a fine man, and would make a good supervisor. The indications are that it will be a very close contest. Burke, the democratic incumbent, has by no means a soft thing.

That's too bad! We had noticed it was looking pretty thin and rough of late, but naturally did not like to speak of it. By the way, Ayer's Hair Vigor is a regular hair grower, a perfect hair tonic. The hair stops coming out, grows faster, keeps soft and smooth. Ayer's Hair Vigor cures sick hair, makes it strong and healthy.

A Triangular Contest.

Wilford Dennis, who some months ago announced himself as independent candidate for county assessor, but who a month or more back left the county, has reappeared in the political arena. It was reported that he went to New York, but it seems he made a trip to the new gold fields of southwestern Nevada. At any rate he returns to resume his canvass for the assesseorship on socialistic lines. He wants to make radical changes in the valuation of property. That is about the very thing, that property holders want to avoid. As a rule, one who has little or nothing is apt to place a fictitious and exaggerated value upon the property of others. Wilford intends to make a whirlwind canvass from now on. Opinions differ as to which of the other candidates he is likely to injure most, Marchant, the republican nominee, or Jarvis, the democratic aspirant. Many believe that the few votes he will gather in will be about equally divided. Others think his socialistic ideas will capture more democrats than republicans. We do not believe his candidacy will cut any ice either way. It will probably cause the conservative element—which is averse to change in the assessor's office especially—to support more strongly and actively the present incumbent—J. Marchant.

The law requires that all stationery for county officers shall be let by contract to the lowest bidder. Annually bids for the supply of certain stationery have been called for. It is noteworthy, however, that in the long list of items published, some of which are rarely if ever called for, there is an absence of the most important items of expense—namely, record books. These amount to between $500 and $1000 annually, with other supplies from outside stationers and printers, and there is no price for such things fixed, no contract let. Every bill paid on this score for years has been without authority of law. The county clerk prepares the notice for publication for bids. How comes it that this biggest source of expense is not contracted for according to law.

Vitality A-plenty In Monastic Life.

Oh, my friend, you may prate of wasted lives and idleness and the parasites of the church and all that sort of thing, but I fear it is little you know about the vital forces that are feeding and sustaining and strengthening it every hour of the four and twenty.

If I could show you the letters that came to me from that friar in the south of Europe, letters bubbling over with health and happiness and the sweetest resignation, and then show you a photograph of a young man in tonsure and cowl, with the calmest, clearest eyes that ever looked out from under a placid brow; if you could have felt of his knotted biceps and known the grasp of his small but powerful hand and heard the peal of his hearty laughter—for his spirit was bubbling over even there in his serene solitude—you would perhaps begin to understand why the monastic life, in spite of its tranquillity, never stagnates and why the more you contend against the spirit of the religious orders the more they live and thrive.—From "A Fin de Siecle Friar" in National Magazine.

Weighing a Hair.

"To number the hairs of your head is not a very difficult task," said the refiner of the assay office to a friend recently. "A very close approximation can be made by weighing the entire amount of hair on a man's head and then weighing a single hair. The weight of the former divided by that of the latter will, of course, give the desired number. If you will pluck out a hair from your beard I can show you." A long and straggling one was accordingly detached, the refiner putting it on a scale which was inclosed in a glass case and graduated with extreme accuracy. With little weights of aluminium he piled up one arm until an equipoise was reached. The hair weighed three kilograms. "If you reduce this to figures," said the speaker, "it would require 8,000 hairs to weigh one ounce, and, supposing you have six ounces, you have 48,000 hairs."—New York Herald.

Travels in Alaska.

Alaska affords a variety of experiences hard to equal. Business and "wanderlust" combined to take a couple of vagrants to Cook's Inlet, and its surrounding country a few weeks ago. The trip from Seward to Seldovia was made at night and was without interest, except a touch of seasickness about breakfast time. The coast is a constant succession of rugged mountain ranges about 3000 feet high. Seldovia is a small village with less than one hundred people. Here we left the ocean steamer and boarded the "Tyonic," a 56 ton steamer owned by the Cook's Inlet Trading and Transportation Co. Cook's Inlet, named after the famous explorer, is about two hundred miles long from north to south, and from thirty to fifty miles wide. Kinik Arm, is about five miles wide and fifty long, extends north ward from its northeast extremity, and Turnagain Arm, a little larger, opens easterly from the same point, their outlets being on either side of Fire Island. The Susitna river enters the Inlet from the north. The tides in these waters are so rapid that all boats have to anchor each alternate six hours, and are the highest on the continent except the Bay of Fundy sometimes exceeding 60 feet. On each side of the Inlet are vast tracts of excellent farming land. At Kenai, at the eastern side, is a United States Epxeriment Station. In the west the smoking peak of Mt. Iliamna shows that one volcano at least in this region has not entirely gone out of business. After stopping at the small towns of Homer, Kenai and Tyonic we landed at Kinik the third day from Seldovia. An inferior grade of coal, or rather lignite, is found in abundance along the Inlet, and is used by steamers and for domestic purposes.

Kinik is on the west side of the Arm, and has two stores, two eating houses, one saloon (only), a commissioner and recorder's office, and about fifty people. Fine gardens are very common. Our steamer discharged its freight and left on the outgoing tide. My companion, who was unused to roughing it, developed an aggravated case of cold feet and returned also. At 11:30 p. m., I left Kinik in a small boat in company with Mr Hamilton, the superintendent, through whose courtesy I was to take a flying trip to the coal mines. An hour running with the tide, took us to Cotton wood, seven miles. The road house being crowded, we made ourselves comfortable with blankets on the floor. Called at six to a breakfast of bacon, potatoes, hot cakes, coffee, lettuce and radishes, and at seven were on horseback bound for the mines. Our trail led northward along the crest of the bluff, which runs parallel to the Arm, about two miles from the shore, the flat between being thickly covered with grass, and cut by frequent sloughs. At low tide the upper ten miles of the Arm is simply a mud flat. Westward from the bluff is a light forest of hemlock, spruce, birch and cottonwood with a rich growth of grass among the trees. We passed over low hills across corduroyed swamps and frequent ravines, some with bridges and some without. Along the north-end of the Arm the country was much the same, but after leaving tidewater, the hills were larger and more rolling, and interspersed with beautiful lakes full of fish, which rippled the water as they sprang for flies. We stopped for lunch at a settler's cabin, where two enterprising young men have taken up 640 acres of excellent land near the railroad survey, and can see a competence in the future. Soon after leaving the pioneers, we struck the north bank of the Matanusky river, and after a difficult descent of several hundred feet, we reached the narrow level bench along which the stakes of the working survey shows where the line to the mines will be located. A walk was the only gait our horses could travel, and the gnats and mosquitoes were at their worst. Some grumble at this trail, but it is a peach compared to many along the Yukon, as the tundra (moss) is not thick enough to impede travel. After thirty-three miles of interesting misery, we camped for the night and slept in a "mosquito tent." This has a floor of canvass sewn to the sides and a door like the mouth of a sack, so that after getting inside we could draw and tie the puckering string, and laugh at the gnats and mosquitoes. The next morning we awoke at 3 o'clock, and built a fire to get warm. Then we cooked breakfast and at 4:10 were on our way. The saddles were not as comfortable as the day before by painful odds. After going six miles we reached King's river, and followed its right bank six miles then crossed on a substantial bridge. So far today our route had been through heavy timber. We were now entering the mountains. The trees were small and scrubby, the trail ran across ridges and through several small swamps where we had to dismount and pick our way through the thicket of brush by the side of the trail, letting our horses flounder through the deep mire as best they could. Across the summit and down into the Chicaloon Valley we plodded, arriving at our journey's end at ten in the morning.

The city lighting system has not been placed on a full working basis as yet. The city has contracted for 75 lights. At present only 24 lights are placed. These are in places where, before incorporation, lights were maintained at private expense. The reason why the full lighting contract has not been installed, is the inability of the company to get the needed material. Poles were ordered four months ago, and have not arrived yet, and no telling when they will get here. There is such a demand for poles in other and more important points, that outside places, like Jackson, are left until the last. It is uncertain when the complete lighting system will be in operaton.

A couple of linemen from Valley Springs, Calaveras county, struck Jackson late Sunday night en route for home. They were considerably hilarious. On Main street, they halted for liquid refreshments, and one of them occupied the interval of waiting in battering the face of his companion, who was driving the buggy, with his fist aided by the heavy electrician gloves he was wearing. The man stood it all without fighting back, until his physiognomy was badly marred. A bystander on the street, became so worked up over the maltreatment that he pulled the offender out of the buggy, and punched him just for the fun of it. The mistreated one was then told to drive on, which he did, leaving his companion to shift for himself. He did not go far, before the traces broke, and he had to stop for repairs. He managed to get a move on toward home the same night, however. His brother lineman had to remain over until next morning.

CASTORIA.

Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. The Kind You Have Always Bought

Funeral of J. A. Fregulia.

John A. Fregulia was laid to final rest in the Catholic cemetery on Sunday last at 2 p. m. Father Kearny, the new priest just stationed here, conducted the services after the impressive rites of the Catholic church. The Native Sons, of which he was a member, also the Native Daughters, and members of the Italian Benevolent Society attended the funeral procession, with a vast number of private citizens in carriages and on foot, joined in the mournful cortege. The ball bearers were D. Franco, L. Alagranza, F. Podesta, George Courtright, L. Quilici, Jos. Garbarini, and L. Arata.

Deceased was born in Amador county, January 5, 1859, and died at 11 o'clock Thursday night, October 4. He was aged 47 years, 8 months and 29 days old. He was a blacksmith by trade, and for many years conducted the blacksmith shop on Broadway, near the bridge. He was married to his first wife, July 6, 1890. His wife died four years thereafter, leaving two small children. On July, 28, 1898, he was married to Mrs Mary Ferenzi, who survives him. Besides his widow, he leaves a son and daughter, and several brothers and sisters, also an aged mother, who resides on the old homestead ranch east of town. He had been in failing health for over a year, the complaint in its final stage assuming the form of dropsy. He was of a kindly generous disposition, and many warm friends will miss the genial smile with which he was accustomed to greet them.

Big Show Coming.

The Mandeville Company which is billed to play at Love's Theatre Oct. 18th, 19th and 20th, is conceded to have the best collection of artists of any show on the coast. As an entertainment it is different entirely from those given by ordinary companies. Two carefully selected comedies will be presented each evening.

Seville Mandeville, the only child tragedienne in the world, will appear at each performance, both in comedy and tragedy roles, showing her extreme versatility. Miss Mandeville is the only child who has toured over the Orpheum Circuit as a headliner. Illustrated songs by the popular baritone, George C. Stanley, and other specialities go to make the evening's program what it should be. Every one assured a good pleasent evening.

Total Registration.

Contrary to general expectations the voters enrolled upon the great register of Amador county outnumber the record of two years ago,. The total for 1906 is 2778, against 2707 two years ago, and over 3100 of four years ago. It was thought as registrations were very slow in coming in that there would be a decline of three or four hundred names. There is nothing so effective as a campaign for the local offices to get voters to register. Every candidate hustles to get his friends on the voting list. The result is that, while there has been unquestionably a falling off in the voting population, we have 71 more names on the register than two years ago.

CITY TRUSTEES.

Board met October 11; all members present.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

Verbal reports of trustees Tam and Kent, in regard to the condition of certain unsanitary premises, were received.

Ordinance No. 27, an ordinance regulating the establishment and maintenance of public laundries and public wash houses within corporate limits of the city of Jackson was introduced.

On motion of trustee Kent seconded by Leam, and carried by unanimous vote of the board, the city attorney and clerk were instructed to have sections of different ordinances, such as spitting on sidewalks, burning rubbish, etc., printed on heavy card board and placed in conspicuous places from time to time, so as to keep the public informed in regard to those matters

Adjourned until next regular meeting November 1.

Sold His Orchard.

Henry Griffin, the well known fruit grower of near Pine Grove, has sold his orchard and residence to Peter Gobi, of Sonoma county. Chas. Gobi, a son of the purchaser, is here, making the rounds with Mr Griffin, to acquaint himself with the business and the customers. The purchaser, and other members of the family, will be here in a few weeks, and take actual possession. Mr Griffiin intends to move to Jackson, but will not do so until after election day. We are informed that it is Mr Gobi's intention to run the fruit ranch as heretofore for a time at least. His ultimate object is to go into the wine grape raising business, believing that the land in this section is peculiarly adapted for that purpose, and can be had at a far less cost than valley lands. Wine made from foothill grapes commands a much better price in the market, a price that more than makes up for the difference in yield of grapes per acre in favor of the low lands. The time will come, when this superiority of product will be more generally appreciated, resulting in the planting of a much greater area of these foothills to the culture of wine grapes. Mr Gobi is an expert wine maker, so that he knows exactly what he is doing in this enterprise in Amador county.

Diamond Ring Recovered.

Some weeks ago Tony Marsino, the Volcano stage driver, lost in Jackson, a diamond ring, valued at $250. He posted notices of the loss, but failed to find it. Charles Tam, son of W. Tam of this city, who is working in a store in San Francisco, met an acquaintance whom he had known in Jackson, who came into the store, and showed him a diamond ring, which he said he had picked up on Main street, in Jackson. He told him he had been offered $100 for it, but said he would rather take $5 from the owned, than to dispose of that which did not really belong to him. Tam recognized the ring—as the one lost by Marsino, and asked if he wanted to find the owner. He said he did. So he telephoned to Marsino, who went to San Francisco by the first train, and met the finder and received the lost ring. He gave him $20 as a reward. Marsino returned Thursday evening, bringing back his costly piece of jewelry, and greatly pleased over its recovery. It seems the finder, whose name we have not learned, left Jackson soon after finding the ring, and took it with him without any intention of appropriating it, but anxious to find the owner. Advertising the matter seems not to have entered his mind.

Republican Speaking.

Senator Thomas P. Flint and Judge C. Brusie will address the citizens of Jackson on Saturday, Oct. 20. These speakers will also address the citizens, with Englebright, the congressional candidate, in Sutter Creek, October 19th.

When a horse is so overworked it lies down and in other ways declares its inability to go further, you would consider it criminal to use force. Many a man of human impulses, who would not willingly harm a kitten, is guilty of cruelty where his own stomach is concerned. Overdriven, overworked, when what it needs is something that will digest the food eaten and help the stomach to recuperate. Something like Kodol for dyspepsia that is sold by F. W. Ruhser.

Insane Commitment.

Nellie May Standish was examined for insanity last Saturday, resulting in her being committed to the Stockton Asylum, to which institution she was taken by deputy sheriff Kay, on Monday. Her case is a peculiarly sad one. She was an inmate of the asylum in 1904, and was discharged about a year ago. Her mania seems to be fixed. She is restless and violent at times, with intervals of depression. She was in the county hospital several days before examination. She was a resident of Ione, and a married woman, the wife of Charles Standish.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MINING NOTES.

Lucas—This mine formerly known as the Tripp mine, near Big Bar bridge, is running along satisfactorily under the management of F. C. Hammond. An air compressor passed through town on Wednesday, bound for this mine, and will be installed as soon as possible to run machine drills.

Bunker Hill—E. H. Harrington, the superintendent, reports everything moving smoothly, with the output leaving a nice margin over all operating expenses. The building of the new hoisting works has been put off until spring. This was deemed a better plan, than to have the machinery coming in during the dead of winter, with other drawback inseparable from winter construction. At a meeting of the directors, held October 9, a dividend of two cents per share was declared, payable December 1. This is the first dividend. The amount disbursed, will be $4000, as it is expected that this rate will be maintained monthly for an indefinite period.

Kennedy—At this mine they are busily engaged in installing the new air compressor. The machine shop of the company is running night and day, owing to the rush of work.

Sulphurets is being hauled through this city from the Easy Bird mine, near Mokelumne Hill, to Martell depot, from thence to be forwarded to the reduction works at the bay. The mine is operating a ten stamp mill and it is said that the rock carries an unusually heavy percentage of sulphurets which yields from $50 to $60 per ton net.

The Oneida mill is running 20 stamps, the South Eureka 10 stamps, and the Central Eureka 30 stamps.

At the Argonant, sinking is progressing steadily. The output continues on the same liberal scale that has characterized the mine since the resumption of operations.

A Bell Cat.

Some party, or parties unknown, secured possession of the Ledger office cat, during Wednesday, and decorated the same with a red ribbon collar and the orthodox democratic emblem—a miniature bell. This was intended as a good joke on the Ledger office. Thursday morning the pet canine seemed delighted to greet us with this symbol of democracy suspended from its neck, and is still carrying it as a non-voter's mute protest against the methods of the Santa Cruz convention. We haven't the least idea of who was the perpetrator of this practical joke, but if it was designed to rile up the party feelings of the editor, it was a miserable failure. We want everyone to understand that the cat is under good republican training, if it is wearing a campaign bell.

How Plate Glass Is Made.

The cast plate glass of which mirrors, shop windows and such things are made is prepared from the whitest sand, broken plate glass, soda, a small amount of manganese and cobalt oxides. The glass when perfectly melted is poured upon an iron table of the size required, and the thickness is regulated by a strip of iron placed down each of the four sides of the table. Immediately after it is poured out the molten substance is flattened down by an iron roller, which lowers the glass to the thickness of the strips at the sides. It is then annealed or tempered for several days, after which it is ground perfectly level and polished to transparent brilliancy. The first plate glass was made in 1688 at St. Picardy, France, where the process was found out by an accident, as so many other important methods in manufacture have been discovered, where there were eyes to see the accidents and minds to apply them or the lessons they taught to the advance of art or industry.

The Irish Bull In Journalism.

Of a well known reporter of a past generation many curiosities of style are still repeated with zest by Dublin journalists. It was this man who explained, describing a case of drowning off Dalkey, "The body was washed ashore by a receding wave." Of a fugitive from justice he wrote: "The burglar was surrounded on all sides by the police. Escape was impossible. Suddenly he made his way down a cul-de-sac and disappeared through a side street." The most popular story of this impressionist writer, however, relates to Mr. Gladstone. On the Grand Old Man's one and only visit to Dublin he was interviewed by the eccentric press man. Mr. Gladstone, at the conclusion of a somewhat amusing array of questions, very courteously expressed his pleasure at meeting the interviewer. The latter, in a high state of delight, said with enthusiasm, "The pleasure is mutual, Mr. Gladstone, but is all on my side."—London Tribune.

The Oldest Sense of Humor.

The oldest idea of humor is surprise. This the child exhibits (for that which is oldest we shall find in the youngest) when it hides and cries "Boo!" both surprising and frightening its senior, be this senior father, mother, brother, sister or friend. One may find this primal sense of humor distributed through the modern short story. Frequently the turn in the plot, if not in its development, hinges upon this child humor of surprise. Even some grownup folk will pull a chair from under one, thus showing themselves still children in their sense of fun. The verbal conceit found in much of the verse in the pages of modern comic papers is of this same class of humor and furnishes conclusive evidence that a number of men and women are at child's play in literature. Poems which end contrary to their foreshadowings are of this sort. —New York Herald.

A Curious Custom.

In certain parts of India in families where there are several daughters the youngest sisters may only marry after the elder sister is married. Of course it frequently happens that no suitor appears for the elder, in which case she is got out of the way by a very neat expedient. She is wedded to a tree or a large flower, and then the younger sister may marry. The elder sister must be careful, however, to choose a plum, apple or apricot tree, from which she can get a divorce, for if she married an elm, pine or poplar these are sacred trees and must not be trifled with.

His Wig In His Pocket.

Benjamin Franklin once wore his wig in his pocket at the court of Versailles. When he was about to present himself at the court for the first time he was informed that a wig was essential. Franklin's head was so large that no ordinary wig would begin to fit it. However, one was found sufficiently large to pass him through the antechambers, after which he was permitted to remove the ridiculous conventional appendage and place it in his ample pocket.

Habit-forming Medicines.

Whatever may be the fact as to many of the so-called patent medicines containing injurious ingredients as broadly published in some journals of more or less influence, this publicity has certainly been of great benefit in arousing needed attention to this subject. It has, in a considerable measure, resulted in the most intelligent people avoiding such foods and medicines as may be fairly suspected of containing the injurious ingredients complained of. Recognizing this fact some time ago, Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., "took time by the forelock," as it were, and published broadcast all the ingredients of which his popular medicines are composed. Thus he has completely forestalled all harping critics and all opposition that might otherwise be urged against his medicines, because they are now OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. Furthermore, from the formula printed on every bottle wrapper, it will be seen that these medicines contain no alcohol or other habit-forming drugs. Neither do they contain any narcotics or injurious agents, their ingredients being purely vegetable, extracted from the roots of medicinal plants found growing in the depths of our American forests and of well recognized curative virtues.

Instead of alcohol, which even in small portions long continued, as in obstinate cases of diseases, becomes highly objectionable from its tendency to produce a craving for stimulants, Dr. Pierce employs chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine, which of itself is a valuable remedy in many cases of chronic diseases, being a superior demulcent, antiseptic, antiferment and supporting nutritive. It enhances the curative action of the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherrybark and Bloodroot, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery," in all bronchial, throat and lung affections attended with severe coughs. As will be seen from the writings of the eminent Drs. Grover Coe, of New York; Bartholow, of Jefferson Medical College, Phila.; Scudder, of Cincinnati; Ellingwood, of Chicago; Hale, of Chicago, and others, who stand as leaders in their several schools of practice, the foregoing agents are the very best ingredients that Dr. Pierce could have chosen to make up his famous "Discovery" for the cure of not only bronchial, throat and lung affections, but also of chronic catarrh in all its various forms wherever located.

Picking Peanuts.

The seeds of the peanut are planted like beans, and when the vines have come up and the nuts are ready for harvesting the farmer takes a cultivator, especially made for that purpose and starts down the long rows. On either side of this cultivator are two long knives which sink into the ground sufficiently to cut the taproot of the vine. The same process is gone through with on the other side of the vine. The main root being thus severed and the ground loosened, the vines are lifted into shocks like corn. They are cured by allowing them to stand in the sun for about ten days, when a colored woman and children are sent into the field to pick the nuts from the vines. An average picker will pick about five bushels a day, for which he is paid at the rate of 10 cents a bushel.

German scientists announce that the material for a man weighing 150 pounds can be found in the whites and yolks of 1,200 hens' eggs. Reduced to a fluid, the average man would yield ninety-eight cubic meters of illuminating gas and hydrogen enough to fill a balloon capable of lifting 155 pounds. The normal human body has in it the iron needed to make seven large nails, the fat for fourteen pounds of candles, the carbon for sixty-four gross of crayons and phosphorus enough for 820,000 matches. Out of it can be obtained, besides, twenty teaspoons of salt, fifty lumps of sugar and forty-two liters of water.

Leading Authority.

"Mister," said the sad faced individual who had sneaked in the big skyscraper, "can I sell you the great 'Encyclopedia of Sporting Events?'"

"Nope," replied the busy man. "We have one encyclopedia of sporting events already."

"That so? Where do you keep it?"

"Why, we try to keep him on that stool over there, addressing envelopes. I mean the office boy, and he is an encyclopedia on everything from a game of skiddoo to the Olympic games."—Chicago News.

Aroused Her Suspicion.

"Mamma," asked the little girl, "has Mr. Brown got heart disease?"

"I don't know, my child. Why do you ask?"

"Well, it says in my new book that faint heart never won fair lady, and when I saw Mrs. Brown I made up my mind that something must be wrong with his."—Toledo Blade.
